Pen/paper

Breakdown:

Find (or create) a beginner's "madlib" game and advise the student to fill in the words that are missing. For beginners, you can create a word bank with possible answers, so that the student has something to work from.

For intermediate level and above, do not provide a word bank, but allow the student to rack their brain for a word that might make sense within the sentence. In some cases, multiple words might make sense in the blank. However, this game practices the tense of the word, proper adjectives, nouns, etc.
